I think that handing Microsoft a 2 year moratorium on licensing out Windows would be very fair. They would be allowed to sell the software on retailer shelves only. This would allow them access to an open market, while giving all competitors 2 years to catch up on market share. This would totally open up the licensing market MS used to monopolize the industry.(ie. cheaply bundling their software in with manufacturers PC's.) This would have to be announced in advance to give all parties a lead time. If I can help just email.
